Situation in Other Cities. In other cities, such as New York, Boston, Cleveland, Chicago and Philadelphia, the dimming of the signs except for three and a half hours a night is expected to make a substantial difference in coal consumption, which the fuel administration estimates will amount to 250,000 tons of coal a year, or enough to keep 100,000 people warm through the winter. Electric advertising representatives, who have had several conferences with Mr. Garfield on this subject, pointed out that the electric light sign was made up of five-watt globes, which was only one-tenth the size of the average light in the home, and that with darkened streets more people would stay at home REPORT BY FRANCIS ON RUSSIAN REVOLT

light in the homes, and that with dark-ened streets more people would stay at home and burn lights, and the saving would be small. It is thought, however, that the fuel administration may have acted on the supposition that darkened electric signs would convince the av-erage citizen that the government is in earnest about saving coal, and thus lead him to stoke his own furnace with more care. Ambassador in Conference Here. Ambassador Bakhmeteff returned to Washington early this afternoon and went into conference with officials of the embassy. It was expected he would issue a statement later in the day.

One of the largest eigns to be affected in this city will be one reading "Food will win the war. Do not waste it," which is maintained by the Potomac Electric Power Company at 7th street and Pennsylvania avenue. Since the outbreak of the war the company has used this sign, formerly rented for about $3,500 a year, for patriotic purposes. It was employed to stimulate interest in both liberty bond campaigns and to help recruiting in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps before being arranged to help the food administration. Agreement Is Reached.

Peace and Land, Strong Cards.

Two of the strongest cards being played by Lenine, it was pointed out, are those which call for a cessation of fighting, a part of the program of special interest to Germany, and for a redistribution of the land among the peasantry. This latter promise, it was pointed out, is being emphasized by the bolsheviki because they know the psychology of the Russian peasant, whose dream for generations has been that of land which he may call his own. This latter promise, it is held by persons here who know about Russia, is almost as strong an appeal as that of peace.

Kerensky knew this, it was argued but he also knew that a redistribution program could not be accomplished in the present chaotic condition of affairs, and while he mentioned it frequently, he asked that it be put off until after the war.
